Ted talks...

I'm without words to say. I feel like a failure when I can't think of anything to say. This West Freeway family means more to me, next to God and my family and my sweetheart, than my words are adequate to tell you.

You have allowed me to be a part of your weddings, your loved ones' homegoing ceremonies, and your babies' young lives, and "thank you" just don't cover it.

I remember what a thrill it has been when the young parents that I had in cradle roll bring their babies to class to hear, "Day one, day one, God made light when there was none."

I need you all to know what it has done for my life to have your encouragement and your patience that you have shown me in this column. I love you all and I feel I need to step out of Ted talks... for a while.

I love you all... Ted

Two Possibilities

Are you a math nut? I'm purely an amateur at mathematics. I got lost in the mathematics of Genesis 5 recently. According to that chapter, Adam lived to be 930 years old (5:5). He lived to see his great-great-great-great-great grandson Lamech born when he was 874 years old (by my math). I started with the creation of Adam and called that year "0." Using that chronology, Methuselah was born in my imaginary year 687. He was the oldest man who ever lived, and died at the age of 969 (5:27). That would be my year 1656. Noah was born in 1056 and the flood came when he was 600 years of age (7:6). That means the flood happened the year Methuselah died (my 1656).

Two possibilities exist. Either Noah's grandfather died in the flood, or God did not bring the flood until after he died, but during the same year. Each possibility teaches a lesson.

Genesis 6:3 states that God set a definite time limit for most of humankind because of their growing wickedness. "My Spirit shall not strive with man forever, for he is indeed flesh; yet his days shall be one hundred and twenty years." Rather than limiting lifespans, God likely was determining a date for the end of all mankind by flood. If Methuselah was righteous like his father Enoch, it is possible that God determined to allow Methuselah to complete a long life before the flood.

The Bible, though, is not that specific. 1 Peter 3:20 assigned God's motive as patience. "...When once the Divine longsuffering waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was being prepared..." Noah wasn't just a ship builder. Peter called him "a preacher of righteousness" (2 Peter 2:5). Methuselah may have perished in the flood despite a godly father and a righteous son. Long life is not necessarily proof that one is right with God.

Methuselah is an example of the truth expressed by the apostle Paul in Romans 11:22:

"Therefore, consider the goodness and severity of God: on those who fell, severity; but toward you, goodness, if you continue in His goodness. Otherwise, you also will be cut off."

I can't be sure about Methuselah, but I can be sure about me (1 John 5:13). Live in the grace of God. Accept his mercy.
